Nutrition and Integrative Medicine for Mental Health
March 29, 2020 – April 2, 2020
Presenters: Leslie Korn, Ph.D., MPH, LMHC
Program Location: Kripalu Center for Yoga & Health, Stockbridge, MA.

Program

Do you have clients who seek advice and alternatives to medication and standard treatments? In this certificate program, Leslie E. Korn provides an extensive roadmap for the practical application of integrative medicine for conditions including depression, anxiety, insomnia, bipolar disorder, PTSD, and ADHD. Ethics and scope of practice, along with detoxification and alternatives to psychotropics will be addressed.

Covering topics such as culinary, behavioral, and herbal medicine; nutritional therapies and supplementation; aromatherapy; bodywork, yoga; and more, this immersion teaches you how to:

- Implement evidence-based protocols for nutritional and herbal approaches
- Balance circadian rhythm in people with depression, bipolar disorder, and PTSD
- Demonstrate the use of a food/mood assessment to evaluate client eating patterns and how those patterns may influence their mental health
- Present stage-specific anaerobic and aerobic exercise and self-care methods to decrease dissociative symptoms in clients.

At the end of this program, you will have received the advanced knowledge and practical methods to treat, educate, coach, and refer clients appropriately, based on their needs.

The target professional audience is for introductory to advanced mental health and healthcare professionals.
